Idaho State Parks
JUNIOR RANGER PROGRAM

The Idaho State Parks Junior Ranger Program, for ages 6-12, is designed to help kids have fun while they learn about their state parks and make connections to the natural world. Children are encouraged to hike with their parents; attend park presentations; find and identify plants, animals and rocks; keep their campsite clean; and learn how to be safe in the park. When your child completes the activities in the Junior Ranger Program Guide, they receive their Junior Ranger certificate signed by Scout, the program mascot! Check individual park Facebook pages often for special Junior Ranger activities.

ROUND LAKE STATE PARK

Round Lake is a kids' paradise. They can swim, float, play in the sand, learn to paddle a canoe and catch their first fish. Walk around the small lake to discover the world anew. Take the Swamp Tromp nature trail. Find a frog. Watch an osprey dive for a trout. When the day is done, sit around the campfire roasting s'mores and savoring the day's adventures.

HELLS GATE STATE PARK

Hells Gate State Park is the gateway to Lewis and Clark country and Hells Canyon, the deepest river gorge in North America. Shady campsites along the Snake River make comfortable base camps for exploration of the surrounding area. Jet boat excursions into Hells Canyon operate in spring, summer and fall and leave from the park's docks.

DWORSHAK STATE PARK

Camping, boating, fishing, swimming, hiking and water-skiing are just some of the many activities that await park visitors. A boat ramp and handling dock provide easy launching most of the year. A fish-cleaning station is nearby to help with the day's catch.

take in the vistas at PONDEROSA STATE PARK

Hike, bike or drive to Osprey Point at the end of the peninsula. From the mile-high overlook, watch boats cruising the deep waters. Gaze north into the Frank Church - River of No Return Wilderness. Come in the spring to marvel at the sea of wildflowers.

FOR ADVENTURE IDEAS.

ON FOOT
hiking: The Idaho Centennial Trail extends approximately 900 miles from Nevada to the Canadian border, offering an epic adventure. For details, visit parksandrecreation.idaho.gov.

disc golf: This fun sport is increasing in popularity and can be enjoyed at several parks. Players throw a Frisbee® or special disc into a mounted basket several hundred feet away. Like golf, the fewer strokes (throws) the better. Check out the courses at Eagle Island, Farragut, Lake Walcott, Massacre Rocks and Three Island Crossing State Parks.

rock climbing: People travel from afar to climb the dramatic spires of Idaho. City of Rocks National Reserve is a popular destination with traditional and bolted routes that cater to almost any ability level. Nearby Castle Rocks State Park is a dramatic geological area of granite spires and monoliths.

ON WHEELS
mountain biking: With more than 12,000 miles of singletrack available and at least twice as many dirt roads, Idaho is a haven for mountain bikers. Check out the 84-mile Weiser River National Recreation Trail, Boise Foothills, the Idaho Centennial Trail, Harriman Trail, the Route of the Hiawatha Bike Trail. More trails are accessible at Castle Rocks, City of Rocks, Farragut and Ponderosa State Parks.

ohv. Idaho boasts one of the nation's largest trail systems for off-highway vehicles (OHVs) with more than 15,000 miles of varied terrain. Be sure to try out the OHV Recreation Area at Bayhorse Ghost Town and the Lombard Trail at the Land of the Yankee Fork State Park. Free OHV classes are taught around the state. Remember: Stay on trails and don't cut switchbacks, take shortcuts or create new trails. Find great trail mapping resources at trails.idaho.gov.

road eyeing: Scenic byways and paved park roads are perfect for cycling along flat or mountainous terrain. You'll also find multi-use trails statewide, which are perfect for families. The scenic 73-mile Trail of the Coeur d'Alenes in northern Idaho is one of the world's longest paved trail. Don't miss the Wood River Trail system in the Sun Valley area.

ON WATER
kayaking & canoeing: Whether you prefer the thrill of whitewater kayaking on a raging river or the relaxing paddle of a canoe or kayak on a mountain lake, Idaho state parks have much to offer. The state has 93,000 miles of rivers and streams and more than 2,000 lakes and reservoirs to choose from. For ideas, visit parksandrecreation.idaho.gov.

fishing: Both fly fishermen and lake anglers will appreciate all the offerings in Idaho. Cast a fly in Henrys Fork of the Snake River for trout, or set up camp at Henrys Lake State Park, located at a high-mountain lake known for its record-producing brook trout and rainbow/cutthroat (cutbow) hybrids. Heyburn and Lake Cascade are popular too.

boating: Whether you want to view panoramic scenery, or you prefer to fish, waterski or rent a stand-up paddleboard, Idaho State Parks can deliver. Always wear a life jacket, available at the loaner stations located in many parks. We also offer free boat safety courses. Visit boatidaho.gov to sign up or for more information.

CASTLE ROCKS STATE PARK
Climbers flock to southern Idaho to experience the world-class climbing found here and at nearby City of Rocks National Reserve, which has more than 700 additional routes!

BRUNEAU DUNES STATE PARK
The tallest sand dune in North America rises 470 feet above small lakes in the high desert south of Mountain Home. Climb the dunes or rent a sand board from the Visitor Center and sled down! By day, you can fish, birdwatch, camp and hike. By night, view the stars at one of only two public observatories in Idaho. No vehicles are allowed on the dunes.

explore the wild side of
PRIEST LAKE STATE PARK
Named for the 19-mile-long lake that it borders, this park offers the best of beautiful North Idaho. Dense cedar, fir and tamarack forests are home to the park's year-round inhabitants, such as whitetail deer, black bears, moose and bald eagles.

make a splash at
EAGLE ISLAND STATE PARK
This 545-acre day-use park features a waterslide, popular swimming beach, picnic area and disc golf. More than five miles of trails offer an ideal place to ride horses, hike and walk the dog.

Bruneau Dunes State Park
Round Lake State Park

chosen by LONNIE JOHNSON,
PARK MANAGER
"Priest Lake State Park is Idaho's most northern state park and the recreational headquarters of North Idaho. This park offers opportunities for the entire family. White, sandy beaches entice the visitor to the clear waters that await them. Four hundred miles of groomed snowmobile trails and hundreds of miles of roads and trails for ATVs or motorcycles can be accessed from the three campgrounds that make up Priest Lake State Park. During midsummer, huckleberries can be found in and around the park; perfect for pies, pancakes or sundaes. For the historian, Priest Lake was home to silent film actress Nell Shipman, who in the 1920s made films at what is now Lionhead Campground. Remnants of a log flume from the logging days still exist outside of Indian Creek campground. Priest Lake State Park has something for everyone, in every season."

LAND OF THE YANKEE FORK STATE PARK chosen by DAN SMITH, FORMER PARK MANAGER
"This Central Idaho state park is situated amid historic mining towns and boasts phenomenal scenery. My favorite place in the park is the Bayhorse OHV trail system. The trail system begins at either the Yankee Fork Interpretive Center near Challis, or from the ghost town of Bayhorse, which is a half-hour drive up a rocky canyon. At Bayhorse Ghost Town you can explore the once thriving mill, hotel and boarding house. As you ride your ATV up the trail, you'll see the remains of prosperous mines. From Ramshorn Mountain, you can see Mt. Borah, Idaho's highest peak, as well as eight mountain ranges in one sweeping panorama. Nestled below in the forest are Bayhorse Lakes, with their campgrounds and fishing."

HARRIMAN STATE PARK
chosen by JOYCE STOREY, SOUTH REGION ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT
"Harriman State Park is a jewel of Idaho not to be missed! You can hike and bike in the summer, fly fish along the famous Henrys Fork of the Snake River, cross-country ski in the winter and explore the historic ranch unit where the Harriman family spent so much time. If you stay overnight in one of the historic ranch houses, you'll feel like you've travelled back in time. The park and the wildlife are wonderful to photograph any time of year, and if you have the chance, take a horseback ride along the trails to see some great views. In the fall you may even get to see and hear elk bugling in the park."

COEUR D'ALENE'S OLD MISSION STATE PARK chosen by KATHLEEN DURFEE, PARK MANAGER
"This northern Idaho state park is all about preserving Idaho's oldest standing building and the relationship between the Jesuit priests and members of the Coeur d'Alene Tribe who built it. The Mission is a marvel in its design and construction and stands as a monument to ingenuity. The huckleberry-stained ceiling is a visitor favorite. The Sacred Encounters exhibit at the Visitor Center brings the two worlds, Jesuit priests (Black Robes) and the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, together in a wonderfully displayed mix of artifacts, photos, drawings and stories. The beauty of the site is breathtaking year-round and provides the perfect backdrop for a memorable wedding or event. Coeur d'Alene's Old Mission State Park is a must-see!"

Idaho forests produced $2.34 billion in wood and paper products last year. But our forests aren't just a natural resource for products, they're a special place to get closer to nature. When the forest is actively managed, the places we work and play can be healthy, safe, and growing for the future.

NO ONE EVER CALLED IT "THE GREAT INDOORS."

-TIM BURR
FOREST ENTHUSIAST

If we take care of the forest, then the forest will take care of us. Your future fun in the outdoors depends on forest management. That's why we harvest and plant to keep our forests healthy and growing for wildlife, for outdoorsy types, and for Idaho's economy. A managed forest works, so we can play today and tomorrow.
